THIRD INTERNATIONAL INDICTS U. S.

THE BOLSHEVISTIC BEAR DOES NOT LIKE THE EAGLE

The Communistic Government of Russia Bitterly Arraigns the Insolent and Mightiest Capitalist Regime and Imperialism of the United States and Calls on the Proletariat of the World To Prevent Strife In the Orient.

Declaring that since its foundation the Third International has "proclaimed the necessity of war against the insolent and mightiest capitalist regime and imperialism of the United States," the red Communist organization which was founded by Lenin in the Kremlin, March 5, 1919, bitterly arraigns the United States for its Latin-American and Mexican policy. In a manifesto issued Sunday at Moscow it "invites all anti-imperialistic forces to support the people of Nicaragua in their struggle against the base designs of American imperialism."

The Third International is closely identified with the soviet government. Joseph Stalin, who is virtually in control of the Communist party in Russia, is a member of the International Praesidium. Gregory Zinovieff was its president, until expelled from the organization. Trotsky, Kamenef and other members of the left wing also had their difficulties with the International and were demoted from high positions in this vast labor organization which has many affiliations in other countries.

Recently Premier Alexis Ryckoff, in denying Communist activities, in Nicaragua or Mexico, declared that the soviet government would not allow interference in the internal or foreign policy of the United States and added:

"I will dismiss any government functionary who attempts to break this rule." About the same time, Maxim Litvinoff, acting foreign minister, characterized as "ridiculous" statements relative to Communist plots and intrigues in the Latin-American countries.

In its manifesto, which was addressed to "the workers and peasants of the oppressed nations of the world," the International charges American capitalists with exploiting Latin-American countries and seizing all their natural wealth and industries, as well as trying to frighten Mexico into giving American capitalists control of the old fields.

"The whole world is laughing at Mr. Kellogg's attempts to distract attention from the real motive of American intervention in Central America, namely ratification of the American oil magnates and bankers exploiting and pillaging Central America," the proclamation continues, "American imperialism is becoming bolder and cruder in trying to colonize the whole of Latin-America, whose recurring revolts menace the interests of American exploiters."

Declaring that the United States must subdue the entire country in order to accomplish its design to build a second canal in Nicaragua, the proclamation says:

"That is why the mask has been thrown aside and the country occupied under the pretense of protecting the lives and property of American citizens."

"Since its foundation the Third

International has proclaimed the necessity of war against the insolent and mightiest capitalist regime and imperialism of the United States. Every fight of an oppressed nation against imperialistic power will find its support."

The Third International invites all anti-imperialistic forces to support the people of Nicaragua in their struggle against the "base designs" of American imperialism.

Accusing the American policy of seeking domination in Panama and Peru and in arbitrating the Tacna-Arica controversy, the manifesto proceeds: "The League of Nations by its silence has again betrayed the people of the smaller countries to please the imperialists."

Appealing to the proletariat of the world to rally in support of the people of Latin-America in order to save them from enslavement the manifesto declares: "From the Rio Grande to Tierra Del Fuego the populations must organize a powerful movement against the exploitation and spoliation of the United States."

PICKAWAY FOX DRIVE.

The fox drive of Pickaway township attracted a number of people Saturday morning. A number of foxes were scared out of their dens, but only one was captured while a dozen or more escaped the west line toward the river. The crowd enjoyed the sport.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Columbus—Attacks upon four women, two by negroes on the streets of Columbus this weekend, have aroused police and citizens.

Bucyrus—Collection of taxes in Crawford county, was further delayed by the granting of an injunction restraining County Auditor Charles Fry from certifying to the county treasurer the tax duplicate based upon the recent reappraised value of county real estate.

It was contended that the reappraisal is exorbitant and unjust and that taxes should be levied on the old reappraisal under which the June taxes of 1896 were collected.

East Liverpool—After danger was thought past, and street car and highway traffic reopened along a hillside near East Liverpool, a 200 ton boulder loosened by thaws plunged 300 feet into the roadway today.

Approximately $25,000 damage was caused by the slide, which tore a great hole in the new concrete road and twisted the tracks of the Steubenville, East Liverpool and Beaver Valley traction company.

Findlay—Peter Grant, 54, night watchman in a local department store was found dead in the company's offices with a bullet wound thru his abdomen. The safe had been robbed of $8,000.

Celina—Henry Reichert, 49, former president of the bank of Bartlettville charged with embezzlement of $50,000 from the bank will be arraigned today. He was arrested in Dayton on a warrant issued as a result of a second indictment by the Mercer grand jury.

Canton—The appeal of Ben Rudner charged with the murder of Don R. Mellett, for a charge of venue from Stark county probably will be decided upon by Judge A. W. Agler.

Cleveland—The waters of Lake Erie closed over another victim Sunday night. A woman, described as young, pretty and bobbed haired, jumped to her death beneath the floating ice cakes of the lake.

EIGHT PLANTS OF CANNING COMPANY SOLD

Sears and Nichols Properties Bring $610,324—Does Good Will Include Name?

Pending confirmation by the federal court at Columbus all remaining properties of the Sears & Nichols Canning Co., in Ohio were acquired Friday by the first mortgage bondholders' protective committee at a continuance sale in the Ross county court house.

The price was $610,324. The property included eight plants, personal property in and around the plants, labels, advertising and good will.

Sale of the personal property was at an upset price, having been reduced about 50 per cent from the original by Judge Hough of the federal court.

The sale was considered one of continuance, as a question arose whether the protective committee, thru the purchase of good will had acquired the right to use the corporate name of Sears & Nichols. The committee contends that the use of the name is its right, but the matter will be settled at a conference of interested parties at Judge Hough's office at Columbus Monday.

Another sale of the property was set for next Wednesday in Chillicothe if Judge Hough fails to confirm the contention of the committee that it is entitled to the use of the corporate name of the firm but if he does, there will be no necessity for the sale.

Carnegie Hero Works Way Through College

Eugene, Ore.—Although he has access to $1,000 from the Carnegie hero fund, awarded him in addition to a medal for bravery, Vernon Callaway, University of Oregon senior, is working his way through school by washing dishes. This became known when trustees of the Carnegie fund wrote the university for a record of Callaway's scholastic standing.

Callaway received the awards for attempting to save the life of a schoolmate at St. Joe, Idaho. The ice broke while the boys were skating and the friend fell through.

Callaway jumped in and tried to keep him from sinking until help came. The boy drowned, however, before help came.

AMBULANCE TRIP.

Howard Shaw, employed by The Sturm & Dillard, Chesapeake & Hocking railroad contractors, was injured Sunday afternoon when the end of a derrick boom swung around hitting him on the head. He sustained a scalp wound and was brought to this city in Albaugh's ambulance and was taken to the office of Dr. D. V. Court-right where he received surgical attention, and later was removed to the home of his parents, 345 East Union street.

The biological survey says that a gizzard is the name given to the hardened stomach of gallinaceous birds. A crow, strictly speaking, does not have a gizzard, as this bird does not eat such hard food as do gallinaceous birds.

Montreal Man Lays Claim to Labrador

London.—Rev. Isaac de la Penho of the Sephardi congregation of Spanish and Portuguese Jews at Montreal has just submitted to the privy council of the British empire a modest claim to ownership of the whole of Labrador. The land claimed comprises 511,000 square miles—about ten times the area of England.

Penho bases his claim, according to the Jewish World, upon a charter granted to one Joseph de la Penho, a wealthy merchant of Rotterdam, by King William III.

According to Reverend Penho his ancestor on one occasion saved King William and several members of the royal family from drowning when shipwrecked, and the king in appreciation bestowed upon "Joseph de la Penho and his heirs possession of Labrador."

INSTITUTE OF FARMERS WAS BIG SUCCESS

Attendance Good and Programs Interesting—"Dusty" Miller Pleased All.

The meetings of the Farmers' institute Friday morning, afternoon and evening were fairly attended. The invocation was made by Rev. E. S. Toensmeier and the address of welcome by Thomas F. Jeffries, president of the chamber of commerce. The Bales orchestra furnished the music.

Addresses on live stock feeding were made by F. E. Eichelberger and were very interesting. William A. Ackerman made an address on Farm Finance. Joseph Burns, of this city, sang a solo in the afternoon which was heartily enjoyed.

The Monday Club chorus furnished the musical entertainment in the afternoon and a talk on Community Health by Dr. G. E. Robbins, health officer of Ross county, was well received and was interesting.

Miss Elusina Lazenby, of the O. S. U., gave an illustrated lecture on Planting of Home Grounds, and this was followed by a discussion. The subject was well covered by the speaker.

The Saturday morning session was also well attended. Rev. Franklin McElfresh gave the invocation and the Circleville High School orchestra, furnished the music. Miss Lazenby gave a talk on planting little gardens. The Darby Township Clothing Club Girls gave a clever little playlet entitled; "Who Made the Garment?"

Vegetable Gardening, was given the once over by H. F. Thompson.

Thurman (Dusty) Miller, the newspaper humorist, amused the crowd with one of his inimitable talks at the afternoon and evening sessions. The Township High School orchestra furnished the music for the evening session. A talk on the Corn Borer by C. R. Neiswander, followed by a discussion; a reading by a pupil of the Pickaway township closed the meeting.

The American Legion

RADIO PUT TO USE BY LEGION POSTS

Among the many big endeavors of the American Legion this year, the radio broadcasting programs by Legion posts and state departments, the latter provided for by mandate of the national convention held in Philadelphia, are proving to be a wonderful success. As nearly as possible, some state department of the Legion broadcasts each week. There are numerous Legion local posts that have weekly programs, and one post in Oklahoma City holds its weekly meetings by radio on account of the members being scattered over a large territory. Radio Post No. 404 of Dallas, Texas, recently installed its officers by radio.

A typical illustration of how the programs are received by the general public is the case of the Hudson county committee of New Jersey, which has been broadcasting from station WAAT (235 meters), Jersey City. The programs proved so popular in December that the committee arranged for an "American Legion hour" from 7 to 8 p. m. every Tuesday, and is now presenting them each week.

"We give each post in the country a chance to supply talent which is made up entirely of Legionnaires," James H. Clarke, county adjutant, reported to national headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind. "We have post orchestras, singers, monologists, story tellers, comedians and a variety of other numbers. Many of the Legionnaires have had professional experience. We also include in our program short talks on the work of the Legion, making our programs both entertaining and educational."

Besides using the radio to inform the public of Legion work, the Legion is now employing it to educate Legionnaires how to talk French.

The lessons are broadcast from Station WRNY (the Hotel Roosevelt) from 7 to 7:15 p. m. each Wednesday. The wave length is 374 meters. The teacher is Miss Alice Blum, famous in the World war for teaching the troops an easy way of learning to talk enough French to answer practical purposes. The lessons are especially built for the second trip to France.

When State Commander Rufus R. Rand of the American Legion of Minnesota recently made a tour of the Second district of that state he was welcomed in Fairmont by 200 Legionnaires as guests of Lee C. Prentice post of Fairmont, and entertained with a Legion "wedding" in which the bridegroom was held to the ceremony at the point of a bayonet, after suddenly disappearing once. The "bride" was dressed in lace curtains and wore a six-shooter. The wedding notes of Hinky Dinky Parley Voo were followed with the Shakopee funeral dirge. The "flower girls," two husky Legionnaires, tripped along behind the padre, strewing onion peel nosegays and carrying Danish red cabbage roses, cigarettes and matches. A big ring was carried on a mattress and when the padre asked if there were any objections to the "marriage," one Legionnaire insisted that the "bridegroom's" check for the ring had been returned marked "no funds."

Nominal Travel Charges for Visitors to Europe

The second A. E. F. of the Legion will offer the chance of a lifetime for veterans to visit Europe upon the nominal travel charge. American railroads have granted one-way fare for the round trip from the Legionnaire's home town to the port of embarkation. Steamship fares for Legionnaires Paris bound, range from $145.50 up. Through the co-operation of the battle monuments commission and the French government tours to all sectors of northern France and Belgium where American troops were billeted and engaged have been arranged. These tours, starting and ending in Paris, will cost from $5 to $16.50 and with one exception include a visit to one of the large American cemeteries abroad. Legionnaires will be saved more than $1,000,000 while globe trotting on the continent by the elimination of passport and passport visas.

Disabled Veterans Are Scattered Over World

According to figures announced by the American Legion's national rehabilitation committee in Washington, disabled American veterans of the World war are scattered in almost every part of the world. A total of 317 veterans are being cared for in hospitals outside the United States under contract with the United States veterans' bureau. These men are in the Canal Zone, Hawaii, Philippine Islands, Porto Rico, Guam, Canada, Belgium, British West Indies, Denmark, England, France, India, Ireland, Italy, Yugo-Slavia, Norway, Rumania, Scotland, Sweden, Wales and Switzerland.

New Country Homes In Demand

Comforts of City Spread to Suburbs and Rural Districts—Carbide Gas in Greater Use.

CITY dwellers moving toward the country and farmers seeking more comfortable living conditions are dotting the countryside with new or rebuilt houses, compact, tastefully designed and complete with modern conveniences.

The Dutch colonial house pictured here illustrates one type of inexpensive country home, suitable either for the suburbanite or the honest-to-goodness farmer. It is scientific in arrangement, charming in appearance and has been designed to offer the accommodations required by the conditions of country life.

Special Features

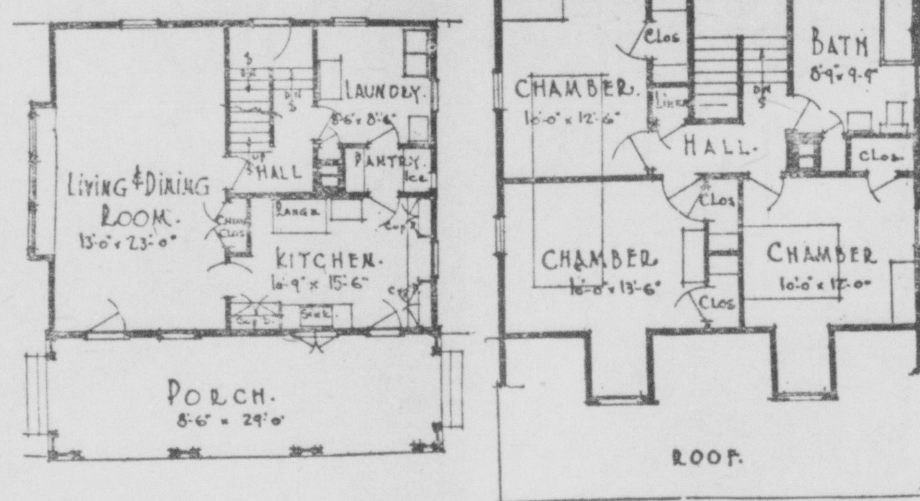

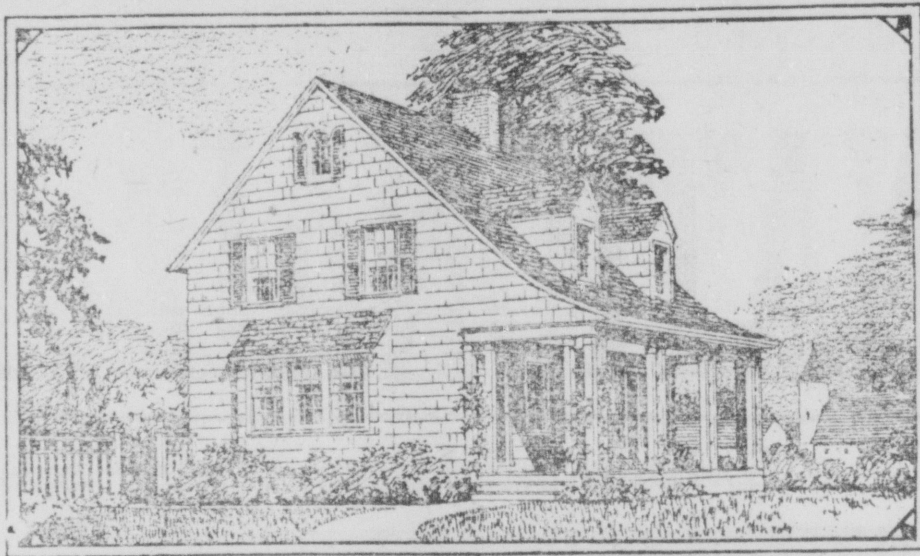

On the second floor there are three good-sized bedrooms, five closets and a bathroom large enough to hold a single bed in an emergency. On the first floor the combination living and dining room occupies one side of the house. It has a built-in china cabinet with glass doors and drawers for table linen and silver below. The built-out window is a sunny place for geraniums and potted plants in winter.

The kitchen is large and well planned, has windows on two sides and adequate wall space for sink, work table, range and gas hot plate. Both pantry and kitchen are conveniently located, and the latter is quite large and has facilities to enable its use as a washroom. The cellar runs the full length of the building and will house the furnace and provide extra space for storage.

Lighting in the Country

Modern lighting is often neglected by the rural population, although it is a first consideration with people accustomed to city life. Carbide gas, which has become increasingly popular in rural homes, is suggested for the present house, since it can be used for convenience cooking and ironing, as well as lighting, and it makes the householder independent of outside supply. The light is soft and white. The plant is buried underground a short distance from the house, and the gas, which generates automatically, is conveyed by ordinary city gas piping to the various rooms and outbuildings.

For Town, Suburb or Farm

First Floor Plan

This house has been modestly designed and was planned to be built of frame construction with wood siding exterior. It should be inexpensive to build, but the cost will naturally vary according to location, running as low as $4,000 in some parts of the West, but considerably above that figure in some Eastern sections where labor and material are high. Inasmuch as labor is usually estimated at 50 per cent of the total, the more the owner can do himself the cheaper his cost will be.

The plans were made for the Architects' Small House Service Bureau and can be obtained from any branch or from the national headquarters at Minneapolis, Minn.

Fur Is Featured on Newest Coats

Blending or Contrasting Colors Make Deep Collars and Panels.

The difference between a cloth coat this season and a fur coat is that the cloth coat has a little less fur than the all-fur coat, observes a fashion writer in the Kansas City Star. The long stole collars, the deep shawl collar, cavalier cuffs, and panels of fur on the skirts all bring the quota of fur (and let it also be said the price) of a fur-trimmed cloth coat very close to that of the fur coat. The beauty of the cloth coat trimmed in fur has been brought almost to a state of perfection by the designers. Greens trimmed with rich brown fur, red coats with collars of skunk, fox scarfs on slim wrap-around coats, black caracul on black broadcloth all testify to the perfection of blended furs and fabrics or to the use of contrasting effects.

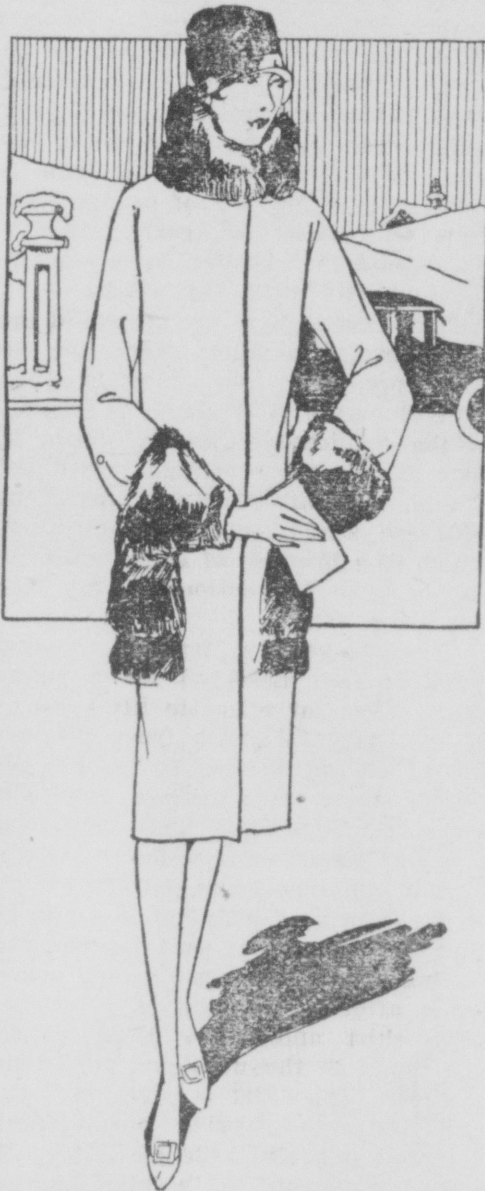

The coat silhouette is by no means confined to the wrap-around effects; the cape coat is smart. So is the coat that has fullness above the waistline and confined at snugly fitted hips.

The black coat and the red dress is a smart ensemble, so is that which takes contrast into consideration. The green coat, green dress and green hat are perfectly blended in this season's mode, so are the browns and the tans and other fashionable shades.

Natural lynx, pastel and white foxes, wolverine, leopard, ermine, mink and sable are accented. Evening wraps of metallic brocades or velvet also added their quota of furs, some elaborate styles being augmented by rich all-over embroideries and borders of fringe.

Fur wraps are often on dolman lines. Long stoles of sable, wrapped several times around the throat, are interesting additions to several of the costumes.

Fringe, often used in sections headed by squares of embroidery, was important, and jeweled pins, bowknots, or ornaments added brilliance to many gowns, posed at hip, shoulder, or at the center front. Flowers, large crushed roses, dotted the generous skirts of tulle and chiffon dance dresses. Lace was used sparingly, in collars, cuffs and in slender draperies to mark skirt slashes. It also is for yokes, chiffon being another material to provide yoke effects, particularly in evening dresses. A happy example of this in pale pink had three yokes posed one after the other in tone-on-tone effect and in battlement cut, being carried out the underarm in a deep square.

The two-piece idea persists, either in actual presentations, or in simulated effects, both blouses and short jackets contributing to this, and evidenced in one or two types as well.

Slender contours, occasionally relieved by the introduction of circular and flared skirt lines, or uneven hems achieved by draped and pointed effects, and plaits provided an animated silhouette. Blouse and bolero themes in extreme moderation represent some of the most interesting models in the collection, always placing accent upon exceedingly youthful themes.

Separate Blouse Is Good

In many of the new costumes the separate blouse is the important half. Made of softer material than the skirt, it falls in graceful lines from shoulder to hips. Usually it has a bloused back, and most often it boasts of loose dolman sleeves. The more elaborate ones are made of metal brocade, printed velvet, or embroidered metallic lace.

Flowered Chiffon

A charming dance or dinner dress is of simple basque lines, with a black lace bodice and a skirt composed of richly colored flowered chiffon, set on a yoke of the same lace.

One of the most interesting and important events of the trip the Seniors took to Columbus last Wednesday was the interview with the governor. I am sure every one was charmed with his cordial welcome and the ease with which he addressed them. He brought to our minds the fact that our parents are sacrificing more than we realize to educate us, and that we should strive to do our very best in order that we may repay them in part for what they have done for us. He also emphasized the importance of high business, social and moral standards. Truly it was so interesting and beneficial to all of us, that we will remember and profit by it accordingly.

VICTORY DAY PROGRAM BY DERBY UNION

Respect and Reverence For Law Must be Written in Hearts of the People.

Mrs. Mary Winfough was hostess at the meeting of the Derby W. C. T. U., with Mrs. Ethel Skinner, Mrs. Minnie Ridgway, Mrs. Ettie Christensen and Mrs. Mamie Dawson assisting hostesses who proved to be loyal to their work. A cafeteria lunch was served to twenty-six members and visitors.

Mrs. Lizzie Edwards had charge of the program and Victory Day program was rendered, and each lady present had an active part in the meeting.

The following papers were read: "Why Prohibition?" Mrs. Agnes Matheas; "Prohibition Law Protects Youth," Mrs. Ruth Liston; "My Part in the Law Enforcement Campaign," Mrs. Mary Wardell. The Union voted to send the budget of ten dollars to the state treasurer.

A great leader once said: "The Star of Reform Stands over the School House of the Nation." Not only are the youths being trained and instructed as to the nature and effects of alcohol and narcotics upon the human system thru this scientific teaching but thru this supplementary observance of temperance day in the schools, they are being impressed by the fact that there must not only be obedience to the law, but that respect and reverence for the law must be written into the hearts and minds of a free people.

In Ohio we have also a law requiring that the constitution of the United States and the constitution of Ohio be studied in the seventh and eighth grade for an amount of time equal to one period each week for a school year. Thirty-seven states have already passed bills requiring definite courses of instruction in the constitution. In this way our children of today will become familiar with the provisions of the government under which they live and will understand the duties of public officials, who conduct the affairs of state.

The work done by the W. C. T. U. thru scientific temperance instruction, is helping to bring about the national prohibition, as a means of part of the law.

The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Alice Hall Tuesday afternoon, February 8. Leader Mrs. Clara Bauhan. Assisting hostesses Mrs. Lizzie Edwards, Mrs. Minnie McKinley and Mrs. Rachel Tattman.

Many Unions are not as fortunate as the Derby Union to have a poet in their society. Mrs. Elizabeth Tull, wife of Rev. Tull, has the gift of being a real poet. The Union presented her with a potted plant during her sickness and she sent her thanks to the Union in the following poem:

That beautiful begonia,
The Union sent to me;
Is an ever constant pleasure,
As you'd know if you could see.

The bright and shining foliage,
While the blossoms of pink are here
Is a sight that makes the heart glad
It its dark green jardiniere.

So please accept my hearty thanks
I shall pray for everyone,
That your good work may continue
Till the sands of life are run.

FAIR ENOUGH THEN

"Bill plays a pretty fair game of poker don't he, Joe?"

"Yeah! If yuh keep yer eye on him."

Wedding Dress Designed on Medieval Lines Is Carried Out in Chiffon Velvet Embroidered With Chenille and Lemon Moire Taffeta With Picture anthemums.

Grace and Charm
in Wedding Gown

Bride May Easily Suit Personality With Models and Materials.

Fall and winter are always seasons of inspiration in the design of dress, especially in the bride's dress, this year more than ordinarily beautiful. Wedding gowns and trousseaus of both French and American authorship reflect very definitely the new feeling for femininity, for softness and subtle grace and elaboration in detail. Something of the ornate styles of long ago, as they are shown in old fashion plates, appear in the latest models of wedding raiment, and some of the most striking of these present engaging illustrations of picturesque costumes for the wedding. With the beginning of the social season the styles for brides became increasingly important and of compelling charm.

Some of the new fabrics brought out from time to time during the year are especially appropriate for wedding gowns. They are so varied that there is felicity of choice for each type of dress shown by the best designers. The tendency to depart from the traditional model, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, is evident in some of the wedding gowns that present delightful pictures of different sorts. The style of dress for a tall, stately bride has a suggestion of the medieval in line and trimming. The rich and splendid fabrics which have been brought out lately answer the purpose of this type of wedding gown, the velvets, moire, brocades and metal cloths in which couturiers are simply reveling. For the first time in years designers are using with lavish hands these beautiful materials of which they are creating formal wedding gowns, some of which are simply regal. Both the fabric and trimming are handled with restraint.

Use of Moire Antique.

In a wedding gown made by an important Paris designer the material is moire antique of heavy quality and high luster, made after a quaint style adapted to the convention of the present. The latest model is used for the skirt, which has the line in front and the long back, the skirt itself being gathered quite full after the manner of the robe de style with which we have long been familiar through the Lanvin period gowns. On the underskirt and bodice of this gown are flounces of point de Venise, which form also a fitted border, like a frame on the long veil of fine Brussels net. The neck of this gown is cut in a deep V and the sleeves are long, flaring slightly over the hand. The trimming on this gown, the material of which is itself very beautiful, is designed with discretion and consists of a slender band of embroidery in pearls and brilliants which outlines the neck and forms a girde belt about the normal waistline, lifted in front. A spray of this embroidery in jumbled flower pattern is shaped like a tapering panel down the front of the skirt to the point of the knee. No flowers are to be carried with this costume, and a slender bandeau with a medallion of pearls and diamonds over the brow holds the veil in place.

Another of these wedding gowns of the dignified type made after a design from Philippe et Gaston is of chiffon velvet in a diversified arrangement of drapery. The skirt cut in the latest model, with uneven hem line, is lifted at one side to show an underskirt of silver lame. The needle work on this dress is an original conception of orange blossoms in chenille, silver thread and small brilliants that give the effects of dew drops on snowy flowers. The yoke and the sleeves, which are long, are cut in one, and the veil of old point hangs over a plain train of the velvet.

Plain Ivory Satin.

Still another gown for the bride of stature and dignified bearing is built of plain ivory satin. This model is moderately short all around and has an even hem. The front and back are flat, the sides gathered to form bouffant panels. The long sleeves are of the satin, and the square train which hangs from the shoulders is untrimmed except at the edge, which is outlined with small pearls. A design of orange blossoms embroidered in pearls, picked out with occasional small brilliants, trips the deep V-neck and widens into a panel down the front of the dress. The bandeau is made of a single row of orange blossoms on a fillet of pearls and diamonds and the veil of Brussels net is hemmed with a line of pearls.

These three gowns are typical of the more formal wedding dress now in vogue, presenting new materials of the fashionable fabrics, shown in some of the most brilliant costumes, and the very latest and most luxurious of these stuffs, lame chiffon plush, which is a brocade of the plush on a supple lame foundation, is very rich and beautiful.

Very different in type of wedding gown is that designed for a young bride. Several adorable little gowns of this sort are shown from different houses of importance, so lovely that the designers seem to have a genuine pleasure in the doing. The very latest thing in materials is a moire taffeta, pure white, the wavy pattern of the weave showing faintly but on a ground that is supple, light as a feather and having a bright sheen. A chic model made after Vionnet has a somewhat wide skirt and plain, fitted bodice, cut round at the neck and with long sleeves. The skirt is plain in front and has at each side a full-length gathered panel of tulle on which are sewn from top to bottom narrow ruffles of tulle. This youthful wedding dress has no train, and the tulle veil drawn close about the face with a little wreath of orange blossoms is full and crisp. The bride for whom this dainty gown is designed will carry a large bouquet of orange blossoms and lilies of the valley and will wear a string of small pearls.

Taffeta Also Shown.

Taffeta is shown in several wedding dress models from important houses, especially in this young-bride type. It is combined with tulle in some very successful designs, making an ensemble that is fresh and airy and flower-like. Taffeta lends itself particularly well to the picture gown and dressmakers find the fashioning of this type of dress very pleasing. A Vionnet model in which taffeta is used is made rather long, with full gathered skirt lengthened to the ankles by a wide band of tulle. The bodice of this gown is plain, with normal belt line, and the yoke and sleeves in one are made of the tulle. Medallions of pearls in an orange blossom pattern are attached in a row several inches apart down one side of the bodice and the skirt, and the veil of tulle, with an orange blossom bandeau, hangs very full to the bottom of the skirt, enveloping the slender figure like a fleecy cloud.

Some of the new models even in the youthful style are palliated, but these are extreme and appear more suitable for formal evening wear than for a wedding gown. Lovely crepe de chine and marquisette gowns are shown and become very well a certain type of woman, and lace is distinctly fashionable this season. The real laces are much in demand, and the bride who has a legacy of old lace is most fortunate.

Although negligees appear to be more varied both in styling and fabric than heretofore, certain models combining simplicity with richness seem to lead in favor.

Professor Mathers was speaking at San Francisco. His topic was business training. "The difficulty in getting good help lies not so much with the help itself as with the employer," he insisted. "As a rule, efficiency in any kind of endeavor is gauged by the expectations of the employer."

"Too many employers are like Jones," "How is your new secretary?" a friend asked of Jones.

"Great," answered Jones. "Already she has things so tangled up in the office that I can't get along without her."

AMUSEMENTS

Have you ever been to Paris—city of the midnight fun? Bebe Daniels has. In fact, she's been stranded there!

Her current starring comedy, "Stranded in Paris" arriving at the Met theater Monday takes Bebe from a small western town to the land of her dreams. On the way over, she meets handsome young James Hall and gives him her Paris address.

Finding the street on which the house is located, she discovers nothing but a heap of ashes. Not knowing what to do, her worries are increased when a thief snatches her purse. Bebe gives chase but loses him in an amazing maze of streets. Incidentally, she loses herself.

Naturally, when Hall comes to call on her and discovers only a burnt ruin he starts making a search of his own finally finding her at St. Po, involved in the most incredulous series of questionable adventures one might ever wish to keep away from. And how, you ask, did this girl reach the fashionable hotel at St. Po?

Well, after losing her way, she wins a position with "Hortense," a modiste. They ask Bebe to deliver some gowns at Deauville, but thru a switch in the railroad tickets she is transported to the other resort and welcomed as Countess Pasada.

Laughs? You can't count 'em! Smiles? Miles and miles of 'em! Thrills? Enough to chill and chill! Beauty. Enough to make any pirate's booty! What else could you possibly ask in a Bebe Daniels comedy?

Original Steeplechase

Steeplechase is a horse race in which the competitors have to surmount obstacles, such as hedges and ditches, in order to reach the winning post. The first race of the kind was run in Ireland by a party of fox-hunters, who actually made a distant church steeple the goal of the impromptu race. Such matches soon grew in favor, and steeplechasing became a recognized branch of horse racing.

MUCH LUMBER
WASTED EACH
TWELVEMONTH

Large Amounts of Short Lengths Should be Used— Often Clearest in Log.

One-fifth of the lumber produced in 1925 was wasted.

This is the conclusion of the wood utilization committee of the United States department of commerce, according to B. M. Stahl, specialist in farm buildings in the department of agricultural engineering at the Ohio State university.

The entire lumber output of the country could have been increased 20 per cent without felling an additional tree or adding another dollar in mill equipment if lumber in lengths of 8 feet and less had been in wider demand. Short length lumber is an important factor in building economy.

Small homes and farm buildings offer opportunities to use large amounts of short lumber. Where long lumber is used in place of short lengths there is waste. The custom of demanding long length lumber originated when the need of conserving our forests was less apparent.

Short length lumber at the sawmill is unavoidable, Mr. Stahl points out, and builders should consider themselves under obligation to use these short lengths to the utmost. An increased demand for short lengths will permit more efficient felling of trees and a more efficient utilization of logs.

The production of short lengths in saw and planing mills is as inevitable as the production of shavings, sawdust or bark. There is economy for the logger, millman and consumer in their utilization. Often they contain the finest clear wood in the log.

Never Used Them

"Say, this bus doesn't look as if there was a single thing on it that wasn't worn out," declared the prospective purchaser of the used car.

"Well," said the salesman, "it has at least two parts that are as good as new; it formerly was owned by a reckless speeder who didn't even know it had a low gear or brakes."

Mr. and Mrs. Blue were married in the old Kemp homestead within sight of their present home. They have lived on their farm for more than 46 years, having built their home in 1879.

Mr. Blue was born in Fairfield county and reared in Pickaway county where his family moved shortly after his birth. In 1874 he went to London and entered the mill business with the late Sammy Watson. Five years later he engaged in farming and has spent his entire lifetime since then in the farming business.

He has been raising registered Jersey cattle and Barred Rock chickens for more than 30 years and has gained an enviable reputation for his herd and flocks. He also is known for his fine Concord grapes and other small fruits.

Mr. Blue is one of the best known grange leaders in Ohio and has been honored for his work in this line. Mrs. Blue was formerly Miss Carrie Rankin and was born and reared in Madison county.

Camphor Is Useful

Camphor is most soothing and healing and is used in practically every hand lotion for smoothing roughened skin. The spirits of camphor are slightly antiseptic, dry up quickly and heal the annoying little fever blisters or cold-sores that so often follow a slight cold, or indicate that the system is just a little out of order. The camphor may be applied frequently until the cold sore begins to disappear.

COME AND LEARN SOMETHING.

The secretary of the Ohio chamber of commerce, George E. Chandler, of Columbus, will address the meeting Tuesday evening and tell you how other chambers of commerce function. Mr. Chandler is an interesting talker and he tells something worth while. Come and hear him, it will pay you. 31janyd2.

'FLESH AND DEVIL' PLAIN FACTS ARE GIVEN TO GRADUATES

Third Capitol Week Makes N. Y. History—First Time in Annals of World's Largest Theatre.

New York, Jan. 28.—Metropolitan film circles are buzzing with the news that the Capitol Theatre for the first time in its history is holding a picture three weeks.

Public demand compelled Major Edward Bowes, Managing Director of the famous Capitol, to announce that "Flesh and the Devil" would have to be continued a third week. In all the seven years of Capitol Theatre history no picture has ever enjoyed the distinction of playing so extended a run.

Broadway first sensed the box office importance of the M-G-M feature when police reserves were called to handle the crowds opening day. John Gilbert plus the ravishing Greta Garbo swept critics and public off their feet with resultant S. R. O. at all performances. Predictions are made by New York critics for a Greta Garbo stardom in short order.

"Flesh and Devil" opens at the Metropolitan Theatre here Feb. 16th.

SPARK PLUG'S INSIDE STORY

Sillimanite Used for Cores Found Only After Wearisome Search.

Those small porcelain plugs on which your motor depends for its efficiency and power are the basis of an industry running into the millions in production and value.

Within their insignificant bodies they carry a tale of adventure and research surpassed by those of few other industries.

They tell of the long patient search for sillimanite, a mineral highly resistant to electric shock, almost impervious to high temperature and of great mechanical strength.

Search by Scientists.

They recount the tolls of scientists in research laboratories and their dangerous climbs through the immense crevices of the volcanic mountains of California, digging out this mineral, once believed too rare for commercial use and now being sent down mountainsides by the tons.

Even after its delivery into the commonplace factories of the industry, the mineral goes on through hundreds of delicate operations to come out finally as a mere spark plug!

All this care and research and adventure have built up an industry that produces 80,000,000 spark plugs annually, at a value of some $60,000,000. The sillimanite that goes into their manufacture is the discovery of one producer, bringing out 50 of the 50 millions of spark plugs annually. But the products of the others may be of the synthetic sillimanite, a laboratory product, or of porcelain compounds.

Many Other Uses.

Besides being installed in motor cars they're the things that help make all the gasoline-propelled boats, airplanes, tractors and stationary engines go. Of the 80,000,000 output 58,000,000 are used in passenger cars each year, 14,000,000 in trucks and the rest in all other forms of gasoline motors.

A spark plug will last five years and more, but it's the conviction of spark-plug makers that they should be replaced annually if the motorist would economize in gasoline and oil.

Regard Railroad Track as Real Danger Signal

Every motorist on approaching a railroad crossing should look and listen for trains, according to the legal department of the National Automobile club. The courts have ruled that travelers upon a public highway, in attempting to cross over railroad crossings, must look and listen attentively for the approach of trains. If such a traveler, by the exercise of reasonable care, could have seen the approach of a train by looking in time to have avoided injury, it will be presumed, in case he is injured, that he either did not look or if he did look, that he did not heed.

A railroad track is itself a signal of danger and one attempting to cross it must first look and listen, and, if necessary, stop, look and listen for an approaching train. This rule is only the standard of necessary caution and care.

Shattering Glass Cause of Motor Car Accidents

Sixty-five per cent of the injuries received in automobile accidents are caused by broken and flying glass from windshields and windows, according to the first analysis ever made of the causes of injury to motorists, completed by the Massachusetts Mutual Liability Insurance association.

No figures on this subject have ever been collected before, and the insurance body therefore undertook its own investigation of all accidents on which detailed data were available. The results show that in 1,000 accidents, involving 1,300 motorists, 720 people were injured. Of these, 437, or 65 per cent, were cut by glass fragments. The accidents occurred in 26 states.

The injuries varied from slight cuts to severed jugular veins resulting in death.

Cold Weather Adds to Traffic Hazards

Winter weather brings increased traffic hazards, points out Walter G. King, president of the National Safety council, who calls attention to the fact that both motorists and pedestrians should be extremely careful when snow, hail and sleet are likely to obscure the vision of people both afoot and at the steering wheel.

Here are some suggestions: Be sure your auto is equipped with a windshield cleaner. Many drivers prefer the automatic device which permits motorists to keep both hands free for driving and stopping purposes.

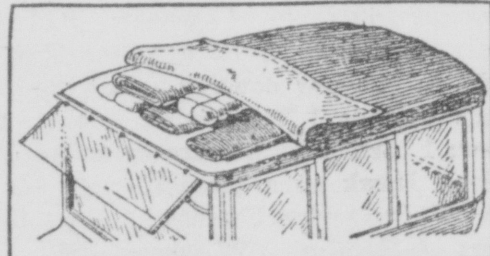

Brakes that function efficiently are absolutely essential at all times and especially during this kind of weather. They should be tested frequently and regularly.

Chains shouldn't be left in the garage these days. When the tires are worn, the car is especially liable to skid if the brakes are applied suddenly. With good treads the danger is somewhat minimized.

Have all of your equipment in good condition. Don't ignore the steering gear, headlights and tail-lights, horns, batteries and other apparatus, if you would avoid accidents.

Luggage Stored on Top of a Closed Automobile

As shown, the top of an enclosed auto body can be used as a fine luggage compartment that will hold extra coats, blankets or parcels and protect them from dirt and rain. It is particularly useful for motor campers and long-distance tourists.

The Top Deck of a Closed Car Converted Into a Fine Luggage Compartment by Fitting With a Loose Cover Provided With Snaps.

The construction is very simple. A row of snap fasteners should be placed at intervals around the edge of the top. A piece of auto top material can be cut to the proper shape and the socket part of the fasteners attached to it. Be sure to have the cover loose enough so that there will be room for as much baggage as you intend to place under it.

Of course a luggage compartment of this type is more suitable for such articles as rolled-up blankets, tents or other items that have no hard, sharp corners to scratch the material of the top.—Popular Science Monthly.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

Some cars seem to be able to get fifty lies to the gallon of gasoline.

The colleges are serving another great need by concentrating most of the 1920 drivers in a few places.

The automobile is replacing the railroads in Denmark, says a special government commission report.

The available tonnage capacity of all motor trucks expressed in ton miles is about 1.9 per cent of the railroad capacity.

Boston is rapidly developing an "automobile truck row" that is rivaling the "automobile row" of the passenger car.

One of the few champions that came through the summer with the title unscathed was the locomotive at the crossing.

JAMES HIAWATHA

Modern Enoch Arden, Hit By C. & O. Train.

Waverly, Jan. 29.—A modern Enoch Arden in the person of James Hiawatha, aged 44, who is of Indian descent, is confined to the Waverly Inn as a result of injuries received about midnight Tuesday when he was run down by a C. & O. yard engine near Robbins Station in Pike county.

Hiawatha was enroute to Columbus to see his aged mother and daughter, and stopped at a C. & O. camp where he made arrangements to spend the night. After that he started back to Robbins, which is about a mile and a half from the camp, and there he got himself a lunch at the village store. He started back to the camp, walking in the middle of one of the tracks. A freight train came thundering past the Indian, and made it impossible for him to hear the approach of the yard engine on the track on which he was walking.

Hiawatha was struck by the yard engine and carried about 75 feet before the engine finally threw him to the side of the track. The crew was not aware of the accident, and for a time Hiawatha was unable to move from the spot.

Then with true Indian grit and determination, Hiawatha started crawling towards Robbins. Finally he reached the station, and the station master notified Dr. O. C. Andre, of Waverly, of the man's condition. An ambulance removed the Indian to Dr. Andre's office, where an examination disclosed that he had a very bad scalp wound, a badly lacerated right hand and a badly bruised and sprained back. Dr. Andre did not believe the man was injured internally.

Hiawatha was to have been taken to the Chillicothe hospital Wednesday, but the hospital was unable to receive any patients due to crowded conditions, and the man was taken to the Waverly Inn. It is believed he will be able to be out in a few days.

The injured man is a direct descendant of an Oklahoma Indian tribe, and is an electrical engineer. He claims to have invented a pocket dictaphone which netted him a small fortune, later lost through bad investments, it is said.

In 1917, Hiawatha answered his country's call to arms and served overseas until 1923. He was with the army of occupation for several years. He was officially reported "killed in action," and upon his return home he found that he was the modern Enoch Arden. His wife had married again during his absence, thoroughly believing that the former husband was dead.

What was purported to be Hiawatha's body was shipped back from France during the war, and buried in his home town cemetery. On his return he was taken to the cemetery and shown the grave where his supposed remains were interred.

FACTS ABOUT ICE CREAM

New York's "finest"—its policemen—lead the world for physical fitness. So says no less an authority than Sir Arbuthnot Lane, surgeon to King George V, the while he praises the diet of milk and potatoes on which most of them were raised in the west of Ireland. Sir Arbuthnot, as well as the most prominent American physicians, preaches milk and more milk to the British people, telling them of its important work as a grower of strong bones and muscles during childhood, and as a repair agent during active adult life. New York's guardians of the law also eat their milk in another form, for they are lovers of ice cream. The six foot "cop" who stops occasionally for an ice cream cone enjoys it as much as any school boy and that is another item in its favor.

A new drink, reminiscent in taste of pre-Volstead days but guaranteed not to contain potential headaches, comes from Canada. The ingredients are provided at any soda fountain, but the drinker must "mix his own." A tall glass containing a generous portion of vanilla ice cream, and a bottle of ginger ale are ordered. Slowly the beverage is poured over the frozen food. The combination is delicious and some suggest that raising the right foot to an imaginary brass rail adds the finishing touch to a perfect illusion. Doubtless a quartet singing "Sweet Adeline" would give the correct note of conviviality to the atmosphere.

STEVENSON'S

WARN WORKERS IN TEXAS OIL FIELDS AGAINST GAS

Constant Precaution Urged by Bureau of Mines and Use of Gas Masks Recommended.

Washington.—Workers in Texas oil fields face untold dangers which necessitate the exercise of constant precautions, according to the bureau of mines, which has just completed an investigation of conditions in the Lone Star state's oil industry.

Investigations by the bureau took in the Panhandle district, the Biglake field of Reagan county, and the McCamey field of Upton county.

Hydrogen sulphide in petroleum vapors, the bureau found, is the most poisonous gas associated with the crude oil industry and frequently gives workers serious cases of conjunctivitis, known as "gas eyes."

Conjunctivitis is usually contracted in derrick cellars, where the gas collects. In the derrick cellar of one well in the Panhandle district 31 men were overcome while putting on the brand-new head.

Around many wells investigators of the bureau found dead rabbits and birds. Dead animals are usually found after a still, oppressive night, when there is little or no air movement. One man collected a pile of more than one hundred dead animals.

In one place visited by bureau investigators it was found that the presence of hydrogen sulphide in excessive quantities caused pronounced darkening of white lead paint on houses, of brass valves and fittings and of silver money.

The bureau stressed the necessity of workmen using gas masks while engaged in derrick cellars and whenever it is believed gases are in the air.

DOCTOR COVERS WIDE TERRITORY

Ozark Mountain Physician,
80 Years Old, Travels on Horseback.

Kansas City, Mo.—At eighty years of age, riding horseback about the forest trails of the high-ridged Ozarks in the Current river country of Ripley county, Missouri, day or night, rain or shine, in heat or penetrating cold, pleasant weather or stormy, facing hardship and privation, his object to bring relief to the stricken, ease to the suffering, health to the sick, and life to little children, is the epic of Dr. Taylor C. Estes, who for almost sixty years has patroled his district of rural Missouri.

But years haven't left Doctor Estes untouched. Although never tall, he has as yet resisted that tendency of age to shrink and shrivel upon itself. His hair is long and white, faded; yet his brows are bushy and tend to a bit of color, while his luxuriant mustache is still tinged brown. Clear blue eyes gleam at you.

Native of Indiana.

Doctor Estes was born in Hendrix county, Indiana, son of William O. Estes of Virginia. He received his general education in the public schools of his day and his medical training at a Chicago medical school. His first practicing was in Cumberland county, Illinois, where he remained until the second year after the close of the Civil war. Then he went to Pulaski county, Missouri, for a short time and finally found his select spot in the Current river country 25 years ago. He has "raised two families," to use his own words, and of 13 children born 11 still are alive.

Doctor Estes has been not only physician and confidential adviser to thousands of families, but also in the busiest years of his practice in Pulaski county was ordained minister and evangelist.

Covers Much Territory.

Doctor Estes' territory extends in a radius of sixteen or more miles in each direction. Of course, he is not the only physician in the territory and he does not have the obligation of going extreme distances to succor the sick. Yet his average trip, he estimates, is 12 miles over the mountain tops. Fifty miles is the longest single trip he remembers to have made. In his previous practice in Pulaski county, where there were fewer doctors, his range was 20 miles in each direction.

Doctor Estes has worn out many horses in his career. How many, he can't remember. A horse does not last long carrying a man at all hours over the ridges of the Ozarks. In Pulaski county and in the earlier years of his residence on the Current river, it took a stable of six excellent saddle horses to keep him mounted for all his calls. Nowadays, however, he keeps but one.

Held in High Esteem.

In his blue denim shirt, collar open at the neck, jeans pants held up by galls, buckskin shoes, Doctor Estes does not look the scientist and physician which he is; yet he never failed to have and hold the confidence of his community, throughout which and in neighboring fields he holds high reputation.

Recalling the days of the World war and the epidemic of influenza, he told of hardships and struggles to keep up with the disease through his territory.

"Almost everybody in this section of the country had it," he declared. "Some homes had as many as six cases at once. The big trouble was to get them to keep windows and doors open. The biggest strain, of course, was getting about to all the cases and watching them through the crisis."

His pay? Doctor Estes seldom or never is paid at the time he makes the long, twelve-mile, six-hour horseback ride to attend a patient. Most likely such pay as comes will reach him long afterwards and as likely as not, it will not be in cash. The biggest proportion of patients in such a district as this, until recent improvements came to it, cannot afford to pay a physician for saving a life, for it is all they can do to sustain the life that has been snatched from blackness. Those who have surplus crops pay in hay and corn, in wood and forage, occasionally in a chicken or a bit of game.

Hound Dog Valued at $25
Ends Case Costing $2,000

Eminence, Mo.—Typical of many found in the Ozark mountains, a black-and-tan hound dog ended a court case here by the "testimony" which it gave. It obtained also the acquittal of Lewis Wells, its owner, charged with stealing the animal.

Wells said he bought the dog from John Widlers. As Widlers took the stand, the dog leaped to show devotion to the him as an old friend. The dog, worth $25, ended a series of trials which cost $2,000.

A Sportsman's Bargain

By EUDORA R. RICHARDSON

(Copyright.)

PAGE BERKELEY, dressed in her golf best, which was very becoming to glistening hair and a clear, sun-burned skin, was playing in a foursome with a man whom financial necessity decreed she should marry. On the nine-hole practice course she could see young Jennings, the club professional, as he taught some beginner.

Page drove off the second tee carelessly, slicing the ball and sending it into the tall grass near the main road. Ordinarily she would have cared terribly about playing such execrable golf, but today there were too many other things distressing her for golf to matter much after all. One couldn't marry Jennings, a man whose only assets were good looks and a genius for golf—especially when all one had was a family that expected one to save it from the direst poverty—a family with an old name and nothing else marketable. The name was, however, very marketable, Page had reason to know, for she felt sure that it was precisely this name that her fiancé, James Johnston, was bargaining for now.

"That isn't exactly like your golf," James Johnston said, his eyes and his lips collaborating upon a very nice smile.

"If you can't endure my golf, let's stop," Page snapped.

Of course she knew that it was outrageous to be peevish with a man who was always kind. She hated, too, to think that he might be in love with her. It gave her a clearer conscience to feel that he was seeking a Berkeley alliance for social purposes.

Page walked across the links toward the green where her ball was waiting for her. She heard a hearty laugh, and a quick little twinge of pain made breathing hard for a moment. Alan Jennings was laughing at his pupil's latest attempt to conquer the drive. Page putted with the awkwardness of a beginner.

By the time the foursome reached the ninth green the links were swimming before Page's eyes. Johnston walked with her to the summer house at the edge of the fairway, while the other couple continued in a twosome.

"Why don't you make a clean breast of the way you feel, Page?" the man asked. "I know you love Jennings and not me. You have just been bargaining with me, haven't you?"

Page nodded dumbly and did not try to blink back the two tears that traced slowly down her cheeks.

"In other words, you are marrying me for my money, and you think you have something to give me in return. Is that it?"

"Yes," Page replied as steadily as she could. "I don't believe you love me any more than I love you. If each of us plays fair, it's all right, isn't it?"

"Yes, dear—all right," the man replied slowly and almost in a whisper. "There's something better than fairness, however. You don't want to be released?"

"No," Page said quickly. "That would be quite impossible. I owe something to the name of Berkeley. Can't we be married soon—very soon—and end the uncertainty?"

Johnston nodded. Then, lifting Page's hands to his lips, he kissed her finger tips with a tenderness that made the girl suddenly ashamed of herself.

After dinner that night Page came alone to the club, came by means of the street car, for the Berkeleys owned no conveyance. She wanted to see Alan once alone and explain that there could be no other meetings.

Tonight inside the club Alan was not to be found. Page went to the veranda and looked out across the moon-kissed terrace. By one of the Georgian pillars she saw two men talking together. They were unmistakably Alan Jennings and James Johnston. In a moment the older man moved toward the square where a few cars were parked, and Alan sauntered toward the main door of the club. Page stepped to meet him.

"Come, Alan, I want to talk to you," she said.

The boy linked his arm in Page's, and together they descended the terraces.

"What do you suppose that old bloke Johnston has just done?" Alan asked. "Offered to take me in business with him at a salary of $10,000?"

Page faced the boy, her eyes wide with unbelief. James Johnston could have been motivated only by his wish to see her happy. Then he must really love her for herself.

"What do you think about it?" she asked.

"Oh, I don't know. I could marry you, but it would mean hard work, and this lazy life suits me."

"You couldn't marry me if you had a million. I want a man who's earned his money," Page announced, and, turning, sped across the lawn. James Johnston's car was still at the edge of the road, and she could see a man leaning against it. Coming up behind him stealthily, the girl placed her fingers across his eyes.

"I'd be afraid to guess who," the man said, standing quite still, "for I might wake and find I had been dreaming."

"Will you mind waking to find that I love you and not a young simpleton whose brains are all in his arms and whose heart is not anywhere?" Page said very softly, but there was a glad ring in her voice.

There was no answer just then, for two strong arms held her in an embrace that made answers seem useless.

AUTO DRIVERS' LICENSE FOR OHIO NOW LOOMS

Annual registration of automobile drivers in Ohio was approved in Columbus at a meeting of the Ohio State Safety Council, and bills providing for such registration will be introduced in the State Legislature soon.

The annual fee for the registration was said to be intended as a safety rather than a revenue measure, would be 25 cents for each driver. Fifteen cents would be retained by deputies making the registration and 10 cents forwarded to the state.

Drivers' licenses, under the bill, might be revoked by the state commissioner of automobiles, or by any court. Liability insurance might be demanded of careless drivers, but compulsory insurance is not provided for. The registration would be made under direction of the secretary of state, in the same manner that license tags now are issued. Examination of drivers might also be provided for by local officials.

STYLE HINTS IN FASHIONS FROM PARIS

Artificial flowers are lovelier than ever and seem to be more profuse than ever before, soft-petalled, delicately perfumed roses leading over other blooms for evening wear, closely followed by clusters or sprays of leaves. Soft feather flowers in all the colors of the rainbow and the large exotic blossoms which are perennially popular adorn many a smart gown.

In the daytime the silk camelia in various colors, with a silver or golden sheen, the Alps violet and gardenia are attractive novelties. Rosebuds of the more sturdy type. Carnations and violets remain the favorite for the mantau. The latter are especially lovely nestling in a soft gray fur collar.

Gay little belts have wheedled their way into fashion's favor, when they are not made of the same material as the gown, they are usually of suede, matching the chic collar and cuffs, or of a cutout design on a firmer back. A number are inlaid with mother-of-pearl in a checkerboard arrangement.

They have been put not only on smart winter frocks, but on fur and cloth coats. A gorgeous gray krimmer coat of Russian cut, with a snug, closefitting collar, blouses slightly and there is a dull purple belt about two inches wide, emphasizing the slenderness of the hips and lending a very smart line.

Garters are ravishing, usually having a jeweled clasp and being broad enough to conceal a small pocket for the lipstick, powder puff and filmy handkerchief.

Varied and novel are the latest offerings in jewelry with the effect of the constant discovering being made in all parts of the world plainly evident. Slave bracelets set with agate or great colored stones are very wide, and these together with the drop earrings to match are decidedly reminiscent of other days. Emeralds turquoise, small pearls and diamonds are favorite for afternoon and evening wear.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Liquidation Still the Order of the Day.

(By Henry B. Clews.)

New York, Jan. 29.—The action of the market this week has afforded further evidence of fatigue, due mainly to the fact that prices in a number of instances had reached heights at which they ceased to be attractive to the important financial interests, who have been rather free sellers, with the result that supplies have been more than sufficient to meet the demand. As frequently noted in these advices, January is generally regarded as a liquidating month and some time is required before this condition is reversed. As previously stated, the business outlook continues encouraging. While there is some slowing down in certain directions, most plants are still rather actively engaged and there is nothing to indicate that the purchasing power of the country is to appreciably diminish, nor that funds will not continue to be obtainable at comparatively easy rates. That being the case there is no reason why people holding good stocks should sell them at a sacrifice, notwithstanding that for the immediate future it would seem that the dipping process will continue until values are again lowered to a level at which they will be attractive to the big and little investor. Fitful rallies, due mostly to the retirement of short commitments, will doubtless now and then put in an appearance, but that is all that can be safely counted upon at present.

Tacoma, Wash.—Speaking of names, D. W. Clapsaddle declares he has found many others as bad or worse than his own. For twenty-five years he has carried a book in which he jots down names of people whose nomenclature is unusual, and it contains a Whiteleather, Turnipseed, Waggon wheel, Leatherberry, Grindstone, Shears, Brickbat, and Whetstone. The shortest he has heard of is E. E.
